

The Advanced Diploma in Society, Health and Development

Do you want to make a difference? Have you got an interest in the care and development of people in our society? Did you know that the care industries are some of the biggest employers in the world? If you are interested in a career at management level in the probation service or the police, social work, or you would like to work with children or in the Health Sector, the Advanced Diploma in Society Health and Development could be just what you have been looking for.

Diploma learning is different. It will allow you to learn the skills that Higher Education and employers are looking for, like team working and independent research skills. Throughout the course you will develop these personal and practical skills by working in the real world with industry professionals. You will also be guaranteed work experience which will allow you to make your mark with employers and ensure you stand out from the crowd in terms of future applications to Higher Education or the world of Employment.

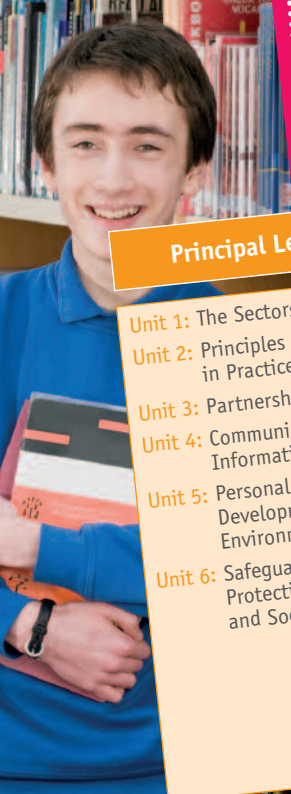

You will produce a specialist project which will allow you to work alone or with employers to produce a study, or to come up with practical solutions to an issue which you think could be improved, or for which you have a particular personal passion.

The Advanced Diploma is equivalent to 3.5 GCE A Levels and is available at John Leggott College.

Sounds good? Ask your teacher or careers adviser about the Diploma if you think it is right for you. If you want to find out more, go to:
